Health Plan Info Ambiguous

by Susan Marsh

The Mount Student Union is having problems getting this year's health plan off the ground. Ambiguous and incorrect information on pamphlets and delays in issuing health cards are the main reasons.

The information pamphlet is provided to each university participating in the plan organized by the Canadian Federation of Students and its insurance company. Individual universities may have slightly different coverage.

The Mount's original pamphlet said that 100 per cent of prescription drugs are covered under the plan. In fact, only 80 per cent of prescription drugs are covered and contraceptives are not included. The pamphlet also contains ambiguous information about the coverage for co-op students. They are covered during their school term, but Jocelyn Prager, Student Union's business manager, does not think the pamphlet makes that clear. A new pamphlet will be available soon with the correct information.

Meanwhile, the delay in the issuing of health cards to students makes it difficult to claim medical expenses.

Prager says the Student Council had to wait for a final listing of eligible students from the Registrar. This is not done until after class drops are finished. This listing has been received and the cards should be ready within the next week or so, said Prager.

A notice will be posted when the cards are ready, giving the place and time when they can be picked up. The new pamphlet should also be available by then.

costs. Chef Rene and Versa Foods absorb the cost of the food for the meals. The cafeteria's kitchen is also provided for the preparation of the meals.

The men are good people ... we have a social responsibility to help them", said Gilbert. The students not only prepare the meals but fulfill a social need with the men by talking to them about their problems, both physically and emotionally.

The students are also given project marks for their involvement in the program.

"It is a project worth keeping going", said Gilbert.

Mount Feeds the Hungry

by Sheila Keeling

Mount St. Vincent professor Nancy Gilbert and 38 of her fourth year nutrition students help feed hungry men through a project called Cottage Meals.

The nutrition students plan and prepare the meals for 60 to 70 men. The meals are delivered by the students to Hope Cottage on Brunswick Street, which is a place for men to get meals twice a day.

The students experience the planning and preparation of large meals and get an idea of what it

AT MOUNT SAINT VINCENT 88.6% SAY YES TO MEN

Wendy Gregory

In a recent poll of 72 per cent of resident students 88.6 per cent indicated they wanted changes in the residence rules applying to male visitors.

A group of Frosh, led by Crystal Harris, went to Vincent Hall, Evaristus, Assisi, Marrillac, Lourdes Hall, and the Birches to ask a series of questions regarding men in residence.

When asked if men should be allowed in rooms, 88.6 per cent said yes. "We're old enough to vote, we should be able to handle men in our rooms," said Kimberly Baird of Evaristus.

Presently, men are restricted to dating lounges only. The dating lounges are simply rooms with old chairs and couches placed around the room. "The lounges are small, unfriendly, and there isn't even a television," said Baird. Several students suggested the television lounges should be available to male visitors. Lourdes Hall, Vincent Hall, Assisi and Evaristus were asked whether male visitors should be allowed in the television lounges and 96.7 per cent said yes. The remaining residences, Marrillac and the Birches, have the dating and television lounges combined.

In a third question covering when men should be allowed to visit, 31 per cent of the respondents said males should be allowed to visit at any time, 26 per cent said they felt the dating lounge hours were fair (7 am to 1 am), while 21.9 per cent said only on weekends.

Crystal Harris said the group did the poll so they could make a stronger case to the administration. "We felt something needed to be said in public rather than behind closed doors. People say nothing will change, so why bother wasting the effort. I believe nothing will change unless effort is put into it."

Not all students agree that changes are needed. Some students commented that the Mount has a reputation of no males in residence and this is why they chose to come here. Of the 425 students in residence 308 participated in this poll. Only 6.2 per cent said they did not want males in the rooms, while 5.2 per cent were undecided.

Dalhousie Profs Still on Strike

By Erin Goodman

HALIFAX (CUP) -- The president of the student council was thrown in jail as Dalhousie University's faculty walked off the job November 4.

Juanita Montalvo was the first casualty of the strike by the 700-member faculty association. As hundreds of students chanted "Bail us out," Montalvo was thrown in a mock prison set up in the lobby of the administration building. The council will maintain the jail and stage a sit-in in university president Howard Clark's office for the duration of the strike.

The prison echoes the sentiments of many Dalhousie students who feel caught in the middle of the dispute. A week into the walk-out, the cafeteria is quiet and residences are emptying out, as students anticipate a lengthy strike.

"There are without question students who went home out of frustration," says student council vice president Terry Crawley. "People are definitely getting very upset. They know the consequences of what a two or three week strike can do for their academic year."

Faculty walked off the job after failing to negotiate a contract providing pay equity, guaranteed cost of living allowance provisions and salaries comparable to those at other Maritime universities. The Dalhousie administration says that faculty demands would cost the university an extra 25 per cent to be added to the faculty salary budget over the next two years. According to president Clark, the money just isn't there.

"The university's financial ability to pay is completely restricted," said Clark in a recent open forum. "Dalhousie either gets substantially additional resources within the next few months or will (have to) become a significantly different institution." Clark told students that the funding formula used by the Maritime Provinces Higher Education Commission to calculate the amount of provincial funding allocated to each school in N.S. is giving Dalhousie a bum rap. He pointed to government underfunding as the source of Dalhousie's financial crisis. On November 8, Nova Scotia Premier John Buchanan said the provincial government won't be pouring any additional funding into Dalhousie University to settle the strike. He denied Clark's charge that Dalhousie is financially worse off than any other Canadian university. "We put more money, per capita, into our universities than anywhere else in Canada," said the premier, who is also acting as the minister of advanced education and job training.

A day after Buchanan released his statement, the chair of the Maritime Provinces Higher Education Commission charged that chronic provincial underfunding of post-secondary schools in Nova Scotia sparked the faculty strike at Dal. MPHEC chair Tim Andrew said Buchanan was correct when he noted the province's universities receive the highest per capita funding in Canada, but he said that's still not enough.

"Obviously, it would be easier to solve the labour dispute if they had more money," he said. Meanwhile, the waiting game continues. No new contract negotiations have been scheduled by the Dalhousie board of governors.

Student councillors recently voted to end their neutrality by supporting the faculty association on wages. Crawley is relieved that council has taken a stance. "We've been too reactive, rather than taking the initiative," he says. "We as a council have been trying to be so representative... but what about leadership?"

NEWS BRIEF

VANCOUVER (CUP) -- British Columbia's first free-standing abortion clinic opened here November 5 with 100 supporters standing in the rain.

Over 100 clinic supporters were "washing away years of pain and struggle and celebrating our victory in the rain," said Hilda Thomas, a professor at the University of British Columbia and steering committee member for the B.C. Coalition for Abortion Clinics.

Montreal Students Strike Too

By Chris Lawson
Canadian University Press

MONTREAL (CUP) -- Police intervention and cold weather are taking their toll on picketers outside the Universite du Quebec a Montreal, student leaders say.

About 700 art and social science students decided 68 per cent in favour of continuing in the province-wide general strike at an assembly November 8, but there are signs that enthusiasm among UQAM students is waning.

Where more than 200 picketed UQAM on the first day, some entrances now are unguarded, with others watched by a handful of people. Several key buildings are surrounded by about a dozen picketers.

Turn-out for general assemblies is also down from the more than 1000 on November 1, when the original strike vote was taken. Some 54,000 college and university students -- about 20 per cent of the province's total post-secondary student population -- are on strike to pressure education minister Claude Ryan to make Quebec's financial aid system more accessible. The strike, organized by the Association nationale des etudiantes et etudiants du Quebec (ANEEQ), was extended beyond the original three-day walk-out after students at 19 colleges and UQAM voted for an indefinite strike.

UQAM arts and social science student council leader Charles Benoit said the superior court injunction which makes it illegal to prevent people from entering the buildings has had a dampening effect on the strike.

"It's hard to mobilize people for the picket lines when they feel alone, and when they feel like there's nothing they can do," he said.

Jeff Begley, external affairs co-ordinator, said depending on how the court interprets the injunction, any form of protest within 300 feet of the university could be considered a violation. Student leaders are to appear in Quebec Superior court November 22 on charges of contempt of court.

Begley told the general assembly that although picketers were sparse, support for the strike remains strong. "People are still staying away from class in large numbers. This is an indirect support, but it is a real one."

Police have charged four students with assault in connection with a picket line incident. Constable Marcel Allard said the four were trying to prevent other students from entering a university buildings.

On November 2, Montreal riot police attacked the picketers in front of several entrances. Demonstrators were bruised and shaken. The next day business administration students -- who voted against the strike -- elbowed and kicked their way past some picketers, while others got in through back entrances.

About 500 anthropology students at the Universite de Montreal voted to join the strike last week. Several social science student associations at U de M will also vote on the strike soon. Two of education minister Claude Ryan's advisers met with ANEEQ executives last week. ANEEQ executive Bertrand Loiselle said the minister's position is softening up.

But Ryan's press aid said the meeting didn't mean there was any change in Ryan's position. "The meeting was not a bargaining session," Luc Rheume said. "The representatives who were there only had a mandate to listen to ANEEQ. The strike is useless, premature and inappropriate," he said.

Ryan presented his reform proposal to Premier Robert Bourassa November 8 but it must go through several studies before it can be made public, the education minister said. Last week about 100 students made the 20-minute trek from UQAM to Concordia where Ryan was presiding over a sod-turning ceremony for Concordia's new library.

Eric Smith Cancelled

by Jana Kenney

Students left the crowded Seton auditorium last Tuesday night angry at Mount organizers who cancelled Eric Smith's speech without telling them. Smith, AIDS victim and member of the Nova Scotia Task Force on AIDS, knew nothing about the mix-up. Conference office officials cancelled the speech on Monday.

"This shows a total lack of appreciation for the student body," said Dan Estabrook, first year arts student.

"It's the height of ignorance not to let people know," said Linda Ashford, also in first year arts, "This was rude, rude, rude."

"They could have at least put a piece of paper on the door saying it was cancelled," said Patsy Bolger, first year P.R. student.

Kelly Fisher, Student Union Alternative Program Director, cancelled the speech fearing a low turnout. Thinking the Eric Smith speech wasn't promoted well enough due to the attention given to the Crosby free trade debate, she re-scheduled it for January.

But students did find out about the event. Posters were seen as was a listing of the speech in the upcoming events section of the Picaro. Some students heard about it from their teachers.

Many students were inconvenienced by the cancellation: getting there early, missing buses, coming from Dartmouth. Said Jane Fitton, first year PR, "It was a priority for me to come. I wish they (the conference office) had their priorities set straight."

Students realized the speaker wasn't merely late when a teacher arrived and explained that she regularly taught her class there Tuesday nights. Students left the auditorium and checked the others, thinking Smith might have been in one of them. Only after students complained at the information counter was the cancellation finally announced over the loud speaker.

While some termed the incident "rude", others "frustrating", student Dan Estabrook said he was just disappointed that it happened at all.

Manus: Still Waiting

by Susan Marsh

Delays in the opening of the Mount Association of Non-traditional University Students Centre have not discouraged Gaby Roughneen, president of the association. With a fully equipped centre and money from the Student Union for a resource person, Roughneen thinks MANUS can improve its function on campus.

"We offer a service to more than 50 per cent of the student body", Roughneen says. "MANUS" is not just a student society. We see ourselves as doing an important part of student council work, serving the needs of non-traditional students and working towards a happy integration of traditional and non-traditional students."

The Centre and the Resource Person are important factors in achieving these goals. The Centre is still not completed because of delays in construction of the new building. Work has now begun on the Centre and it is hoped it will open soon. The Centre is located on the second floor of Seton opposite the Sacateria and will have a kitchenette, study carrels, sofas, an information display area and two offices, one of the MANUS executive and one for Ruth Baxter, the Resource Person. It will be a non-smoking area and wheelchair accessible.

Roughneen hopes the centre will give non-traditional students a place to meet where they can feel comfortable. Baxter will act as a referral agent for any problems or questions that students may have. This will give non-traditional students a focal point so they can become more visible and active on campus.

Roughneen says she is delighted with the support that MANUS has received from the administration and the Student Union. She wants non-traditional students to be patient and to take advantage of the Centre when it does open. "We know there is a lot of talent out there ... they are serious and they have a lot to give. We want to know these people."

Co-op Society is Reborn

by Anne O'Connell

Public Relations, Tourism and Hospitality Management, Home Economics, and Business are four very different programs offered at the Mount, but they do have one common denominator. Each of these programs can involve Co-operative Education. The co-op program provides students with valuable work experience in conjunction with their academic studies.

Academia is not the only important aspect of university life. Societies that are set up for each discipline play a major role in meeting students' needs, whether it's planning social events or providing a platform for students' concerns.

The unique concerns of the co-op student are not being met, according to Cynthia Isenor, a second year co-op business student. Presently, there is no society that focuses on the students in Co-operative Education but that is soon to change.

"I got tired of listening to people complaining about the hassles of co-op," says Isenor, "so I decided to look into ways of helping the situation." Isenor has started by reviving the inactive Co-operative Education Society.

One of the major concerns that Isenor has identified, and the society will deal with, is the problem of relocation. Sometimes a student has as little as two weeks to find a place to live, sublet their apartment if necessary, and move before starting their new job.

Sue McKeage, a second year Public Relations student also in co-op says, "There's potential for the housing problem to discourage people from entering co-op. It's a wonderful experience but there's a crying need for more relocation assistance."

This is one area that a Co-op Society would assist students in. According to Isenor, co-op is becoming more and more popular with universities across Canada. One of the first projects for the society will be to set up a relocation network with other universities across Canada.

The society will be different than other societies on campus. It will run all year around because co-op students do not have a regular school year and are sometimes in classes during the summer months. The society will also keep students on and off campus informed of the society's activities through a newsletter, so even when on a work term, a student can keep in touch.

The first meeting of the Co-operative Education Society will be on Wednesday, November 23 at 7:30 pm in the Rosaria Back Dining Hall. All co-op students are invited to attend. Memberships will be available on the third floor of Seton the week before the meeting, and can also be attained at the meeting on November 23. SEE YOU THERE!

Acadia Student Runs in Election

By Erin Goodman

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CUP) - Rik Gates actually wants to lose. A student at Acadia University, Gates is showing his concern for the future of post-secondary education in an unusual manner -- by running in the federal election.

The fourth-year political science student is one of four people trying to unseat Progressive Conservative incumbent Pat Nowlan, who has held the Annapolis Valley-Hants seat for the past 23 years. Gates is running as an independent on a platform of education issues, but he's not out to win.

"I'm not going out to get votes," he said. "I'm trying to increase awareness of post-secondary education issues." Gates said he was approached by concerned students about the November 21 federal election about a month ago. "I guess what finally made me decide to run was the situation that nearly came about at Acadia." A strike at the university was barely averted in October when faculty negotiated a wage increase to bring salaries up to the Maritime average over the next several years. "After watching the other major parties put education on the back burner, I felt compelled to make it an issue."

On November 1, Gates took part in an all-candidates meeting held at Acadia. "I know I did well at the debate," he said. "I think the other candidates underestimated me." According to Gates, the issue of post-secondary education wasn't touched until he brought it up himself. He stressed the growing problem of accessibility at universities, advocating a review of the Canada Student Loan Program, which he said discriminates against mature students.

"If we're told by all our seniors that we're the future of Canada when people can't go to university because they can't afford it, what kind of future generation will there be?" Gates points to the federal funding formula for post-secondary education as the root of chronic underfunding problems at N.S. universities. He said that Nova Scotia universities should receive funding based on the number of students in the province, rather than the population as a whole. This would reflect the fact that Nova Scotia has the most post-secondary schools per capita in Canada.

Gates would also like to see a department of education set up at the federal level -- post-secondary education is a provincial responsibility -- to reduce regional disparity aggravated by a planned $6 billion cut in federal transfer payments in health and education from 1985 through 1992. A member of the PC youth, critics are suggesting Gates' candidacy is a ploy to undermine the NDP vote in the area. The riding has elected New Democrats in the past on the provincial level. Officials of the Students' Unions of Nova Scotia blamed the recent election of a Tory to the provincial legislature on an election purposely called before classes started, diluting the student vote.

"I couldn't care less if it undermines the NDP vote," he says. "Maybe that's a message to them to clean up their act on education issues."

Students headed for first Canadian university campus in Europe

Studying in the South of France has become a reality for almost 200 French and English speaking students from across Canada when they enrolled at the Université canadienne en France (UCF) this September.

Beginning its second year of operation, UCF -- a co-operative venture between Laurentian University in Sudbury and Toronto-based Blyth & Company, a leader in the field of education through travel -- offers a unique and rewarding experience to Canadian university students. A year at the Université canadienne en France provides students with a chance to earn Canadian university credits in the fields of humanities and social sciences while improving their skills in French and English, and gives them an unrivalled opportunity to experience Europe and meet students from all parts of Canada.

In order to satisfy admission requirements, students must have completed a minimum of one full year of study at a Canadian university, a diplôme d'études collégiales in Quebec or an International Baccalaureate and must be in good academic standing at their home universities.

The fee of $7,995 includes tuition, accommodation on a shared basis in UCF residences, airfare from Toronto/Montreal to Nice with an open return, use of campus facilities, including swimming pool and tennis courts, and four local excursions. The tuition for UCF is the same as for Laurentian University's programs in Canada and Canadian students are eligible for provincial government student loans.

An integral part of the Ontario university system, the Université canadienne en France has attracted top-calibre faculty members from universities across Canada and offers students an educational experience of the highest quality. The curriculum is developed by Laurentian University in accordance with the Ontario Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

The location of the campus on the magnificent 42-acre Mont Leuze estate in Villefranche-sur-Mer, allows students to take advantage of the cultural attractions of nearby Nice. Numerous places of historical and artistic attraction in France, Italy and Monaco, are also within easy reach. A number of trips are organized to give students the opportunity to explore Europe further during the breaks in the academic year. Classes are scheduled Monday through Thursday to allow long weekends for special trips.

In addition, UCF offers a special six-week spring session from the beginning of May until mid-June including an intensive university-level French immersion program and a limited number of other courses.

The Université canadienne en France provides students with an affordable, stimulating and broadening experience. An educational year overseas also broadens students' career options, makes them lifelong friends in other countries and leaves them with a greater appreciation of Canada.

NEWS BRIEFS

Ban Styrofoam

BURNABY, B.C. (CUP) -- Simon Fraser University students are bringing their own cups to school these days.

They get a nickel off every order of coffee or tea if they supply their own cup.

"I don't know if it's because of awareness that styrofoam is a problem, or just to get the discount," said SFU cafeteria cashier Betty Cunnin. "But other people in line are beginning to notice that some are bringing their own, and they're curious as to why." Most foam cups are made with CFCs, or chlorofluorocarbons, popular for the 'small bubbles' effect they create, said a university official. Although non-toxic and non-flammable, CFCs have an atmospheric lifetime of 70 to 100 years, and have been linked to the depletion of the ozone layer.

SFU's cafeteria and pub go through about 19,000 styrofoam cups every week. The plan was set up in September. "Styrofoam is the second largest throw-away on campus (next to paper). That's reason enough to cut back on its use. The University of Western Washington has banned styrofoam altogether," Cunnin said. But now the pub has a new problem. Ceramic mugs are disappearing.

"Some people forget their own cup, and now don't want to use the styrofoam," Cunnin said.

Disabled Ignored

OTTAWA (CUP) -- Visually-impaired students at Carleton University asked for fluorescent markings along stairs -- and got dull orange-brown tape they still can't see. Student council vice president Christine Skladany said she hounded administrators all summer to install easily-visible glow-in-the-dark tape on stairs. But the buildings and grounds department installed the more durable brown tape instead, which also keeps people from slipping.

The committee on the status of disabled students, which Skladany chairs, may smear orange highway paint on the stairwell. Skladany said she is also trying to increase the wattage of the lights over the stairs.

Alf Gets It Right On

To the Editors:

As I was flipping through the November 2 issue of the Picaro I noticed an unusual amount of letters to the editor.

The letters were responses to a letter in the October 26 issue. The gist of the October 26 letter was that men at the Mount, notably those taking business, were wearing suits to impress froshetts. True? Maybe, maybe not.

I was amused at the quality of the responses. I was astonished at the number of responses.

In my limited time at the Mount, one year, I have not seen an issue/article receive as many responses as the October 26 letter

Editors' Note:

We'd like to welcome our new columnist, Emma Davies-Webb. She's a Public Relations student who'd like to share her ideas and opinions with the student body. Watch for her words of wisdom weekly. (How's that for some awesome alliteration?)

has. This issue must be important.

Well, to most university students, fashion is below pen type and binder colour on the totem pole of life's "important issues." What happened to development on the cerebral scale instead of the fashion scale.

If a letter regarding fashion draws this much response - one full page of letters to the ed. - what does this say about those attending the Mount? Is fashion more important to students than say, free trade or rising tuition? Indeed not. The amount of letters to the ed. seems to indicate otherwise.

Maybe too many Mount students are disciples of the Philosophy of Fernando. "You know, it's better to look good than to feel good." I hope not.

Disappointedly yours,
Alf Blanchard, BPR

Eds' Note:

We hope not too. This Mount Mentality really is astonishing and frankly, quite disturbing. Thanks for pointing it out, Alf.

IN CASE YOU WEREN'T WONDERING

by Emma Davies-Webb

Only 26 per cent of South Africa's population is white. Twenty-six per cent! And yet this minority dictates complete control of political and economic power in a country they invaded.

These whites have manipulated decades of economic exploitation and social degradation. Their racist apartheid system denies black South Africans even the most basic human liberties. Blacks are restricted in where they can live, work and travel, what they can say, and even which public washroom they are allowed to use.

These oppressed people that make up 74 per cent of their country's population are subject to inferior education, produce and medical health. They are denied political rights, freedom of the press, and are only allowed to own 13 per cent of the land; their land.

Do you truly realize how lucky you are to be Canadian? We take for granted that ambiguous term FREEDOM. It is a right we are born with, not a privilege denied.

And so the edges of "the big picture" are blurred by the tunnel vision of our day-to-day existence. While the blacks of South Africa struggle for basic rights of equality and justice; they die crying for freedom.

Since the South African government imposed the state of emergency on June 12, 1986, 30,000 people have been detained, 10,000 of them were under 16 years of age.

The atrocities of countless assassinations, disappearances and random killings aren't only history, but continue today. The deaths of freedom fighters like Nelson Mandela and Steve Biko spur motivation in the increasing number of black trade unions, community organizations and women's groups who are struggling to improve their world.

Cry for Freedom. For those who have to die for it, for those who never know it, and for those who complacently accept it. Yet realize you are not powerless in your compassion.

You have the freedom to boycott the products of South African firms operating in Canada such as DeBeers and Rothmans. You have the power to encourage federal and provincial politicians to further sever the ties between our countries, by writing letters and urging others to do the same.

Cure your tunnel vision by seeing the films "Cry Freedom" and "A World Apart". And ensure your tears do not fall in vain.

Free trade, Education and You

It is difficult to predict exactly what ramifications (good or bad) the free trade agreement will have on the different areas of our country. For every opinion in the negative you can find another opinion in the positive...oh...what to do!!! Well my suggestion is to say the hell with everything else for the next couple of minutes and lets look at how it will impact on something near and dear to all of our hearts...post-secondary education.

There are several specific sections of the agreement which have possible ramifications for post-secondary education in Canada.

In chapter 14 of the agreement, the section that deals with the provision of services, education is dealt with more directly than in any other section of the document. In the preamble to this chapter it states that certain government provided services are excluded from the agreement, these include health, education and social services. Yet, within the text of chapter 14 there is no mention of education being exempt. Therefore it is necessary to dig a bit deeper and refer to the schedule following the Annex 1408 section of the agreement. In this section one finds the complete list of services covered under the agreement. Each of these services affected by the agreement are identified only by a code. These codes turn out to be the Standard Industrial Classification Code (SIC). To discover what services these codes represent one simply pulls out their personal copy of Statistics Canada publication Standard Industrial Classification, fourth edition, Department of Supply and Services, 1980 (which I might add is now OUT OF PRINT). The first thing one notices about this complete list of services affected by the Free Trade agreement is that certain Post-Secondary Education institutions are included, despite the assurance that education is exempt in the preamble of chapter 14.

So...what the hell are you trying to tell us Paul Card?

What I am trying to tell you is that under chapter 14 of the Free Trade agreement it is clear that COMMUNITY COLLEGES, SCHOOLS OF ART AND THE PERFORMING ARTS, VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS, TRADE SCHOOLS, BUSINESS COLLEGES AND NON-UNIVERSITY POST-SECONDARY EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS are fair game despite what it says in the preamble of chapter 14.

Well what is the difference if education is effected or not?

Well the first difference that it makes to me is that I was told by the government of this country that Post-Secondary education is not included in the Canada/U.S. Free Trade agreement and it turns out that is. Yet lets put aside my personal distaste of being told something that is simply not true and lets examine what will happen to education if the agreement is passed into law.

The post-secondary education systems in the two country are completely different - ours is a public system while theirs is a private and public mix. Students in the United States cover two-thirds of the cost of their education which has ended up in creating a two tiered education system. Students that come from a higher socio-economic background in the U.S. can afford to go to the institutions where tuition is $17,000 a year, where the administrations can afford the top professor in the country, where the university gets millions of dollars to conduct research, where the labs have state of the art equipment, and where students whos parents do not make under $ 80,000 a year are non existent. On other side of the U.S. two tiered system you will find students who are attending a half ass public institution which offers half ass education in half ass equipped labs with half ass professor where students are paying almost four times the tuition that we pay in Canada.

On the other hand Canadians have a system that is based on the concept that to be educated is a right given to everyone and not a privilege for the wealthy few. Our system is representative of a multicultural Canada where minorities and the poor also have the opportunity be educated. A system which is much more fair then its counterpart in the United States.

Under Free Trade the items included in the agreement between the two countries must be harmonized in order that they can be traded across the two boarder.

So close your eyes...and think real hard... how would you harmonize the Canadian and U.S. educational systems and which system would bite the dust first.

Yours in solidarity,
Paul Card
Student Union President

Frosh Disease

To the Editors:

Dear an appreciator of argyle socks and boxer shorts, I'm sorry; I didn't realize being a frosh was a disease. And please excuse my "bob", but I wear my hair the way I want. I do have a Khaki mini, but my wardrobe does not include a forest green turtleneck (I'm so ashamed!). And I don't have time, nor do I care, how my socks are scrunched.

Not all frosh are the same so don't flaunt your ignorance by bunching all frosh into one stereotype!

Catherine Doucette
"First Year Student"

P.S. Please note the "appreciator of argyle socks" did not sign their name!

Foster Parents Thank Council

To the Editors:

As I was opening my mail in the council office the other day, one of the letters I read was from Foster Parents Plan of Canada. I was very pleased to hear from them, I also thought that the letter would have been better addressed to the students at Mount Saint Vincent University as the Council sponsors children on their behalf.

I am, for that reason forwarding the letter to you to be printed in the Picaro.

"Dear Ms. MacKenzie:

We are writing to you today to inform you of a major change in the lives of Milton and his family. Thanks to your financial and moral commitment, the Taborda family have been able to improve their situation considerably, acquiring knowledge that will always be valuable to them. It is their decision to use their new found motivation and knowledge independently of PLAN in the future as they feel fully capable of carrying along on their own. We know that they are extremely grateful for your help which has enabled them to lay the ground work for a much brighter future. You are to be congratulated for the vital part which you have played in making this possible...."

Thank You,
Cheryl MacKenzie

A Few Misguided Individuals?

To the Editors:

As a senior student I must take umbrage with the Picaro. It would appear that in the November 2 issue, the responses to a controversial topic was dominated by staff comments. Surely remarks issuing from the office of the Picaro should be made by editorials.

If Mr. Sampson's letter is an indication of his mental outlook, he is poorly equipped to enter into the business world, as an ethical person. He would likely refer to clients as biblical beasts of burden. Woe betide the co-worker who might disagree with him. No telling what Mr. Sampson would call such a miscreant. He, Mr. Sampson not the miscreant, berates people for making 'crude' remarks in public while he himself maintains the 'right' to castigate others by making rude comments in your publication concerning their posteriors.

Another letter, in the same issue of the Picaro, seems to have been written by two young men who have covered themselves with urine. What a sad state to be in. Thank heavens that they are not members of the Business Society. It would be a tragedy if such weakness were to contaminate the world of business even further.

Also in said issue, the assistant-chief of Campus Police is having difficulty in expressing herself without bringing her obsession with urology into discussion. Please Miss A.C.C.P. responsibility and authority must be deserved and earned in order to gain respect and dignity.

A Jeffrey G. Mann also seems to have some trouble to adequately express himself. His desire to exhibit his dedicated study of manure piles does not help him in his quest to receive favours from administration. I am sure other means would be more receptive. Such crudity should be ignored.

Children, children is such malediction and the use of four-letter words really signs of maturity? As one writer in that issue of Picaro, said, "you are out of high school now ..."

Leave your infantile expressions and mannerisms lie in the gutter. Cultivate social graces as you increase your knowledge, otherwise your time and money will surely be wasted.

The young of today are, on a whole, intelligent and astute scholars. I have no qualms about leaving this world in their capable hands. I am confident that they will do a better job than we have done with it.

A final admonition, don't be influenced by a few misguided individuals. Graces are still important additions on the road to the acquisition of success. Be proud of yourselves as I am proud of you.

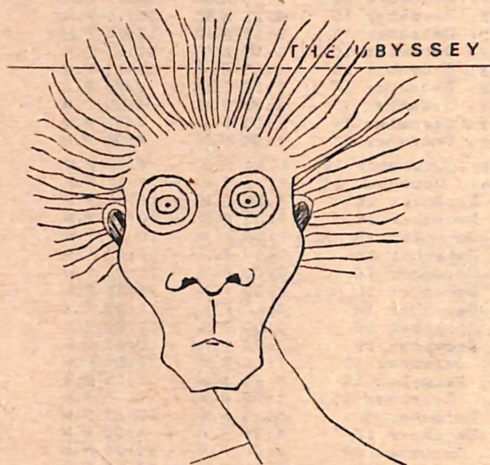

Jacqueline Gabrielle Neck
(Graduate for 2000ace)

Ed.s' Note:

Apparently Ms. Gabrielle Neck has overlooked our Picaro Staff box, which every week reads, "Opinions expressed on our comment pages are those of the authors, not of the Picaro staff." We'd like to point out that only 2 of the 13 letters in our Nov. 2 issue were written by Picaro staff. That's hardly a domination. Besides, the space is there for anyone. One of the staff letters was written by Paul Carroll, who is also the Business Society President. It was appropriate for him to defend himself after being slandered in the original letter from "Unswoning Women".

As for the "children" and their "infantile expressions", they do have a right to freedom of expression. We thank Ms. Neck & everyone else for at least taking the time to write us, even though we may not necessarily agree with all of their opinions. We personally agree with Alf Blanchard on this whole issue.

Frosh Comment:

To the Editors:

I'm writing in response to the letter titled "Male Visitors Ludicrous" printed in the November 2 edition of the PICARO.

Being a Frosh, I had envisioned a lifestyle of freedom, when I got to university, where I would be my own boss over what I did and who I did it with. To me this means responsibility. Responsibility to study at the right times and party at the right times, and not get the two confused.

I believe I am a responsible person. I'm sure that many other people who attend M.S.V.U. think they are responsible also. To gain responsibility, there must first be a degree of maturity. Therefore, I believe that I am a mature person.

To give a person - any person - a "proverbial inch", they will not always take a "proverbial mile". If a child who has to always be in bed by 7 pm is allowed to stay up until 7:30 pm to watch a favourite TV program, that child would be overjoyed. The residents at M.S.V.U. will be overjoyed if we are allowed to have male visiting hours with less restrictions. If the female in residence is willing to take full responsibility for the male she signs in, why not?

I work several nights a week at the front desk of Vincent Hall. We have two dating lounges where males are allowed to visit. I'm sure in saying that six out of seven nights a week both of those dating lounges are in use. I've also witnessed a couple being forced to stop studying at 1 am so they could return to his apartment to wake his roommate while that girl had an empty single room down the hall. That to me is "ludicrous".

For those with double rooms (or triple), there may be a problem. I believe that we university students ARE mature enough to work things out with a roommate. We just need to be given the chance to prove ourselves.

Come on residents! We have been slowly modernizing for along time. Girls no longer have to "sign a paper of permission" just so they can stay the night with friends. The curfew on residents has been lifted and there is no longer a person monitoring the Assisi elevator to check for guys. We have progressed! Let's not stop here!!

Society Overspending?

To the Editors:

In response to the article "Societies Feel the Squeeze" by Jean Sloan in the November 2nd edition of the Picaro, we would like to take the opportunity to air our views, on behalf of the Education society.

The Marketing and Business societies are obviously disappointed with the amount of money student council has allocated to their respective societies. We do not know how much these societies overspent last year. It does not really matter to us. But it does seem to bother both of these societies we were granted $500.00 for the Education Society this year, an amount which is $100.00 more than we received last year. We were quite pleased with the amount but found it no surprise since our budget proposal was both realistic and professional.

What bothers us, however, is the news that our society overspent our budget by $219.00 last year. According to our past files, and our advisor, Dr. John Portelli, this is news to us. But even if we did overspend, the fact is we were granted $500.00 for this year. It is not unfair. No one has played favouritism with societies. We asked for money, justified our request, and received a grant. In our budget proposal we estimated the major proportion of our money would come from fund raising. To date, we have raised $109.00 by bake sales. We are trying to live up to what student council expects of us. Something must be working!

Respectfully yours,
Greer Kaiser, President
Education Society
Marsha Moir, Vice President
Education Society

Record Review

House of Love

by F. Owen Keith

The British independent music scene has spawned yet another promising egg with The House of Love, and their first single in North America, Christine. Their's is a simple guitar sound claiming no musical benefactors and yet I can't stop hearing riffs from the '60s psychedelic movement, and to me that lumps them in with the neo-psychedelic movement of the '80s, alongside bands like the Jesus and Mary Chain and many of their songs remind one of Echo and the Bunnymen.

So their sound isn't unique. Not many bands can claim that status. The House of Love seems to find their individuality in their approach to music, for this approach stresses their urge to be unique. Singer/songwriter/guitarist Guy Chadwick formed the band in London in 1986 to present some songs he'd been writing, and the band was signed by Creation, a label best known in Canada for their work with The Jazz Butcher. They recorded two singles, did some gruelling tour duty, then rested for two months, to avoid sounding "forced on stale" while recording the album, their debut, which swam to the #1 spot on the British Independent Charts.

The album is at once hypnotic and charming, intense and serene, flowing easily between the realistic and the dreamlike from one song to the next. For example, the psychedelically-inspired song Happy followed directly by Fisherman's Tale, "a plea for peace through oblivion" in the vein of a lullaby.

All this amounts to the hatching of a hit in England, and with a new Polygram/Creation contract, instant availability to the North American market, where House of Love is already acquiring a certain amount of renown. Apart from Guy Chadwick, the band consists of Terry Bickers, Chris Groothuizen, and Pete Evans.

Oh, and by the way, that unique approach to music I earlier attributed to The House of Love is one of honesty, simplicity of intention, and a willingness to experiment and remain on an independent label. This is the quality which separates them from the modern flood of look-and-sound-alike bands which drown the music scene.

The Sacrifice

In the shadows
There is a feeling
Of impending doom
No light exists
Only darkness looms

Pain is the only emotion
Since you have gone
I'm trapped in this prison
No way to escape
The night is long

How could you be so cruel
To the one who sacrificed
My heart
Is no longer my own

Was it so long ago?
I know not of time
I hear your voice
The only words
"You are mine"

There is no more
I lie awake
so alone
Like a wounded bird
But not so pitied

Now That's EntertainMount!

By Karen Seaboyer

All you Capers out there, come hither. The John Gracie band of Glace Bay will be in Vinnie's November 18, performing a variety of pop, blues/rock and contemporary country tunes. His recent album release Thinkin' 'Bout Midnight is available in the deejay booth. Ask to hear it! (ADMISSION: $4 wet/dry SHOWTIME: 3:30 - 6:00, Vinnie's Pub, Rosaria)

Deck yourself with bows of holly and ease on down to the Christmas Daddies Pub for live music and a chance to get into the spirit. On November 25 you might get your mug on ATV for being in the pub. All door proceeds go to helping children around the province. (ADMISSION: $2 wet/dry SHOWTIME: 3:30 - 6:00, Vinnie's Pub, Rosaria)

Most of us are familiar with McGinty, so there should be a good turnout December 2 for an afternoon of guitar-strumming, singalong tunes. (ADMISSION: $2 wet/dry SHOWTIME: 3:30 - 6:00, Vinnie's Pub, Rosaria)

Gearing up for the new semester will be the Swell Guys, right after New Year's. Something to look forward to after wrapping up this fall's drudgery... (ADMISSION: $2 wet/dry SHOWTIME: 3:30 - 6:00, January 6, Vinnie's Pub, Rosaria)

Potential rock stars, jingle singers or shower crooners, gather 'round. The Mount choir always welcomes new talent, even if you think you haven't any! Practises are Monday nights. Join now and get in on their Christmas celebration preparations. (ADMISSION: none! PRACTISES: 5:30 - 7:00 pm, Mondays, Rosaria MPR)

MSVU Gallery Researches Africville

by Simon Kennedy

Nova Scotia's Black Cultural Centre, in collaboration with the Mount Art Gallery and the National Film Board, has begun research for an exhibit on Africville, slated to open at the Mount gallery next October.

The exhibit -- the gallery's first on Africville -- should dispel some myths about the once thriving black community. Situated on the shore of Bedford Basin, Africville was razed in the 1950s after being condemned a ghetto. Many believe the government simply wanted the valuable waterfront land. "We want to get rid of the idea Africville was a slum," said Mary Sparling, Mount gallery director, "it was a very vigorous working-class community."

Using a $10,000 grant from National Museums of Canada, two field workers, Rhonda Crawford and Dwayne Provo, have been hired to do the research. Among the items they've found so far are numerous photographs, tapes, school registers and documents. "Lots of stuff has turned up," said Sparling.

And when that stuff is finally exhibited next October, an often neglected part of Nova Scotia's history will come alive again. "We're all really looking forward to it," said Sparling.

MAYBE IT'S YOU!

Fit Tips

Nutritional Considerations For Aerobic Exercisers

by Lisa Boudreau, Athletics/
Recreation Assistant

Unless a physically active person is involved in rigorous training (i.e. a marathon), the best eating plan is to simply follow a well-balanced diet. Combined with regular exercise, a balanced diet keeps a body in top-notch condition. Not only will you look better, you will feel better.

What is a balanced diet? Well, it may sound rather dull, but Canada's Food Guide is the best thing to follow. That means your daily intake should include two milk or milk products, two servings of meat, fish, poultry, or alternates, three to five servings of bread or cereals, and four to five servings of fruits and vegetables. Try to limit intake of alcoholic beverages, high-fat and high-sugar foods.

A well-balanced diet combined with exercise is the most healthy way to condition the body and produce weight loss, if that is the desired result. Studies have shown that while those who diet without exercising do lose weight, but they lose it more in the form of muscle mass, not in unwanted fat. Those who diet and do exercise lose weight in the form of fat while gaining the much desired muscle mass.

So, it is important to follow a fitness program that includes both a nutritious diet and regular aerobic exercise. Good eating habits and regular exercise must become a constant in your everyday life in order to improve the quality of your life today, and in the years to come.

Escape to Ski

Escape to Ski is Warren Miller's latest film.

If you've never seen a Warren Miller Ski film, you've never seen a ski film!

Over the past 39 years Miller has been using his unique blend of humour and ski expertise to produce some of the most spectacular ski footage anywhere.

Huskies to meet Dinos for Vanier Cup

by Robert Daniel

There was a lot of hype and build-up concerning Saturday's Atlantic Bowl at Saint Mary's Huskie Stadium, but most of it proved false. To put it simply, the idea was to have the best from here play the best from there, and have a good competitive game. That didn't happen.

Instead, the Huskies played an adequate, though unspectacular, offensive game (their defense was fantastic) while the Bishop's Gaiters stalled early and gave the Huskies plenty of needed practice for the Vanier Cup game coming up in Toronto.

While many fans and media spectators praised Saint Mary's quarterback Chris Flynn as the star of the 44-10 victory, it was the defensive line who were the real stars, keeping Bishop's to only 10 points. Flynn is still the best quarterback in this region but on Saturday he had the support of a very well organized team who needed to win this year after 1987's see-saw battle that left them out of the glory.

Hopefully the Huskies will all be in top performance in the Vanier Cup game against Calgary's Dinosaurs. The Cup belongs in Nova Scotia - Go Huskies!

Cross-Court

by John Doody

Football fever hit Halifax last weekend as the St. Mary's Huskies handily defeated Bishop's Gaiters in the Atlantic Bowl. Although my hands are still numb from frostbite, it was a joy to watch the Huskies in general and Chris Flynn in particular. He has the uncanny ability to twist and turn an apparent loss into a big play. Time and time again he took the snap, headed towards his own end zone, and barely evading the warm embrace of an opposing tackle, threw a strike to one of his receivers for a first down. Although I think the Huskies are a very good team, Bishop's were not impressive at all. The game was controlled by St. Mary's right from the get-go. Because I know very little about the University of Calgary Dinosaurs, I can't make a prediction on the Vanier Cup. I will only say that if the Huskies play the way that they are capable of playing, the Dino's will have to be a very good team to beat them. I can look forward to watching the Vanier Cup from a much warmer vantage point this weekend and leave my wineskin to dry.

Some people are now getting ready making plans for the spring break next semester. For ski buffs, if you haven't already heard about this beauty of a deal, I'll let you in on it. First of all, the price is the most attractive feature of this weekend get-a-way. You can take yourself and your main squeeze to the highest slope east of the Laurentians for only $300! It's a steal! You get transportation to and from the airport and a hotel, transportation to and from the slopes, all lift passes, and return air fare. Everything except food and booze is included (and the squeeze!). Where is the paradise, you ask? Marble Mountain, of course. Being a Corner Brooker myself, I can vouch for the hospitality and friendliness you will experience. It's an option that should be taken seriously when you are trying to decide where to go for your break. For more info, call Air Nova. Maybe I'll see you there!

Watch for the men's basketball team's home opener, Saturday at 7:00 pm against TUNS. Your first chance to see the boys of '88-'89! Come cheer them on!

MEN'S BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS

On Saturday, November 19 the Mount Saint Vincent Men's Basketball team hosts the TUNS men's team.

The game starts at 7:00 pm in Rosaria Gym.

This will be the men's first home game and an opportunity for you to see the 1988-89 version of our team.

New head coach, Rick Plato, former All-Canadian guard with the Saint Mary's Huskies has been working his team very hard. Come out and support this year's team!

Athlete of the Week

This week's PEPSI Athlete of the Week is Kim Farrell. Kim, captain and setter of the Mount women's volleyball team, played exceptionally well at the Schooner Classic Volleyball Tournament held in Cape Breton this past weekend. Coach June Lumsden was pleased with Farrell, who acts as a quarterback and "runs the plays" for a very young but talented Mount volleyball team. Kim is a fourth year nutrition student at the Mount, having spent two years at University of New Brunswick. Congratulations, Kim!

YEARBOOKS AVAILABLE

by Moira McDermott
Yearbook Editor 1987-88

The 1988 yearbooks are available for pick-up in the Student Union Office, fourth floor Rosaria Centre, between the hours of 9 am - 4:30 pm weekdays with proof of graduation.

Friends of graduates may obtain the books, as long as they supply their friend(s) name(s) and proof of graduation. Diplomas may be used as proof.

The remaining books will be mailed to graduates as soon as a mailing list is published by the Registrar's Office. I do not expect the list from the Registrar's Office until at least January of 1989.

PERSONAL PERSONALS.

Attention Unswoning Women:

Mount Business Society members were spotted in the Library wearing "no-name" sweatpants. Oh my gosh, you don't think your letter influenced him do you? Don't get your hopes up. Today he wore a tie- versatility is what counts.

Unsigned

NO, Ray! I was not breaking beer bottles last Wednesday night. Little Hit.

Colleen: We must do that lunch thing or would you rather have a salad. Guess Who?

Hey PC, How's your fuzzy? Love P&E.

Susan, get busy.

Oh yeah Al! Great Car.

Mah Suzie Q: How's the smelly guy who never bathes?
